Spring fever from decades long past comes flooding back with WIKING's smart BMW 1600 GT cabriolet (year of manufacture 1967/68): with the inclusion of glass, BMW only added the GT with glass to its range for a short time. However, that could not take anything away from the prestigious and at the same time stylish sporty design - its Italian design speaks volumes. Another newcomer to the range comes in the form of a contemporary addition from the 1960 - the VW T1 with its legendary double-cab in the livery of crane company "Rosenkranz"

which is accompanied by the VW T2 minibus taxi and the Still electric truck. The VW 411 was also to be seen on the roads at that time when it was being used as a police vehicle. In stark contrast to this, WIKING has also created the latest VW T5 as a fire service vehicle as well as the VW Passat B7 Variant as the latest addition to the range. The traditional model-makers have added the highest possible level of detail and faithful reproduction in equal measures. Alongside it, the MAN Lion's City and the Sinalco curtainsider semi-trailer also demonstrate how successful WIKING is at producing model vehicles which match the originals from the world of today perfectly, with skill and commitment to ensure its continued success in the future.

WIKING's model upgrades for April bring youngtimers and seasoned classic vehicles together: the traditional model-makers have breathed new life into the historic moulds which have been used to create the Ford Taunus 20M. The car lifting platform today still makes a perfect addition to the clever accessories from the world of early WIKING models. Although it is a long time since it was produced, examples of the MB Trac 700 are still being used in many places as well as the Metz turntable ladder DLK 23-12 and the LF 16 fire service vehicle. The combination of the LPG semi-trailer and MB 1620 truck, as well as the MAN 26.281 dumper truck, will have fans of youngtimer trucks in raptures.

The VW Golf VI Plus completes the array of model upgrades in the form of a driving school vehicle. And for diecast fans, there is the latest AT generation from Rosenbauer on a MAN TGM chassis in 1:43 - in an attractive design ready for service, of course.
