If we are talking about the very latest model vehicles, the new models available from specialist shops nationwide come highly recommended. For the "Pan Americana" version of the VW T5 has been given a facelift to match the original vehicle so that it fits perfectly into the VW family produced by the manufacturers in Wolfsburg. Another addition to the range is the lightweight entry level model from MAN in the form of the TGL tow truck. Collectors will delight at its cargo: five different vehicles from the classic range. Moreover, we see the return of a trio of youngsters from the 1970s: the VW Golf I in the form of the legendary GTI and the sporty VW K 70 join the range along with the silo truck and trailer from Hanomag-Henschel, with creative superstructure to guarantee the attractiveness of the model. And because the WIKING chronology across the decades has been marked by some splendid themed collections, we now have yet another impressive new book entitled "Fascination for WIKING model vehicles". This book not only describes and illustrates the main stages of development from the last seven decades but also presents the passion which has been shown for collecting. It contains 190 pages of more than 1700 WIKING models from yesteryear up to the present day - now that's pure WIKING enjoyment.

Variety is the spice of life - WIKING's model upgrades for April are perfect proof of the wide range of exciting topics covered on a scale of 1:87! We see the return of the Opel Admiral and Citroën DS 23 Pallas to delight the enthusiasts who collect WIKING's historic model vehicles. Both models have been produced using revitalised moulds to give a refined level of detail which replicates the original vehicle perfectly. Another vehicle which joins the range of historical models is the Mercedes Benz L 1113 in the form of the one-time vehicle used by Schmidt-Spedition from Gevelsberg. Other vehicles joining the range for spring include the VW Beetle Cabriolet, the Fendt tool carrier and the VW Porsche 914. The agricultural trailer is put to good use, carrying two different types of straw bale and alongside it is another newcomer to the 1:87 range in the form of the fire rescue vehicle of the Siegen Fire Service, with its dominant emergency number detail. And because the original Rosenbauer Panther 6x6 is becoming more and more popular in Europe, WIKING has marked this development by producing a superbly detailed model of the airfield fire service vehicle used by the Dortmund Regional Airport Fire Service.
